How to study

Good morning. Today I'm going to 1. _____ about how to study. Now, you probably think you know all about that, right? You've been studying for years. And I expect some of you are 2. _____ at studying, really organized and good at concentrating. But there's always room for improvement, and your exams aren't far away, so these tips are for all of you. Right, so, what's the best way to study? Well, first of all, it's a good idea to have some kind of plan or timetable. This could be for the week or a longer revision timetable for an exam, from one month to 3. _____ months. Yes, if you're studying for an important exam it's important to think long term. Draw up a timetable, but revise it often. If it's not going to plan, you may have to rethink it. Next, think about your environment. Make sure the place where you are going to study is comfortable with enough 4. _____, air, etc. Not too hot, not too cold. Make sure there are no distracting noises around, such as television. If you think you concentrate better listening to music, experiment and see if it's really true. Some people really do seem to work better with 5. _____ in the background, especially classical music, but for many people it spoils their concentration. However, if you have to work near a TV, you might have to use headphones to play music to drown out the sound of the TV. In this case, find out what kind of music works best for you, maybe something without words. By the way, you might think you work fine with the TV on, but, again, experiment. You might be 6. _____ at how much better you work away from a TV. Oh, and the other thing is the internet, text messages, Twitter, Facebook, etc. Forget about all of that while you're studying. No, really, you can ignore it for an hour or so; it won't be the end of the world if you don't reply to a message immediately. Right, planning breaks. Plan your study 7. _____ in chunks with regular breaks. Many people recommend half an hour of concentrated study, then a ten-minute break. But you can adjust this to suit you. If you study for too long at a stretch your mind will work less effectively, so be careful. In your short break, you can give yourself a treat, such as a cup of green tea. I wouldn't advise a chocolate bar as a treat – a sugar rush is not great for concentration. OK, so next let's think about what you do when you're studying. Some people just read through their notes or 8. _____ and underline in pencil or highlight important bits. If this works for you, fine, but I'd suggest that it's 9. _____ to write notes of some kind, so your mind is processing the information more. This way you are also producing 10. _____ which will be useful for last-minute revision. I don't recommend very lastminute revision, by the way, but we'll come back to that later.
