1. Read Julie's post and complete it by matching sentences a–f to gaps 1–6. (Escribe en cada cuadrado la letra correspondiente).

Hi. My name is Julie and I'm 12 years old. In September I'm going to start secondary school. The school is called Hillside School and it's in Hillside. 1 I'm excited because I'm going to make new friends and learn new things. I'm going to be in the tennis team. 2 That's going to be fun!

The school is about 20 kilometres away from here so I'm going to take the bus every day. 3 This means I need to get up really early. School starts at 9:00, so I'm going to leave my house at 8:15. 4 I'm going to have my tablet with me, so I can read on the bus.

I'm going to study a foreign language at secondary school, too. I studied French last year and I wasn't very good at it, so I decided to start Spanish this year. 5 My brother says I need to practise speaking Spanish with other people. He says it's fun to practise with friends and it's the best way to get better.

_____ We can meet once a week to talk in Spanish, French or Italian. I can meet new people, too!

What about you? Are you going to start secondary school next year?

A) That's 20 minutes earlier

B) than I leave now. It takes

C) about 25 minutes.

D) Hillside is a big town near my village and it's got a museum and a sports centre. E) I think it's a beautiful language.

Storm chasers are people who follow extreme weather, like tornados, across the USA and try to get close. This is very dangerous because the winds are usually very strong, there's lightning and tornados can lift houses and cars in seconds. They go after these dangerous weather conditions because they are scientists or because it's their hobby. 'It isn't a good idea to be near a tornado, but they are so beautiful,' says Eric a storm chaser from Montana, USA.	Many storm chasers travel thousands of kilometres every spring and summer in the Great Plains. 'I plan my holidays in May or June and I spend the day looking for storms or tornados,' explains Eric. 'My brother and I usually drive for 8–10 hours every day when we're chasing storms, so we're exhausted when we go back to the hotel.' This summer Eric and his brother are going to use a new car that is safer and faster. It isn't easy or cheap to	find a tornado. Storm chasers use expensive computers to check the weather online and make notes on maps to decide where to drive. They look at satellite pictures and try to find bright white clouds. These show where a storm is starting. A satnav is also an important tool. 'We drive on roads that aren't on the map so we need a satnav to find our way back to the hotel,' says Eric. 'We always have a tent and sleeping bags in the car. Last year we used them twice!'

- 1 Storm chasers are always scientists. _____
- 2 Eric knows that storm chasing is dangerous. _____
- 3 The best time to chase tornados is in the winter. _____
- 4 Eric usually sleeps at a campsite. _____
- 5 Most storm chasers need gadgets to find a tornado. _____
- 6 The colour of the clouds isn't important in storm chasing
