Part Two. Questions 8-10 refer to the following text:

Many years ago, an elephant and a monkey had a quarrel. The elephant was proud because he was strong. "Look how big and strong I am," he said. "I can pull a tree down. Can you?"
Now the monkey was proud because he was so quick. "Look how quickly I can run and climb," he said. "Can you climb a tree?"

At last, they decided to go and speak to the Old Bird. "We cannot agree," they told the Bird, "Tell us what you think about it.

Which is better — to be strong or to be quick?"

The Old Bird said to them: "Do as I tell you and then I'll learn which is better. Do you see that great tree across the river? Go and get the fruit from it and bring it to me."

So they went to the river, but the monkey was afraid of the water. "Get on my back," said the elephant proudly. "I will carry you. I am big and strong and I am not afraid to swim across the river."

There on the bank stood the tree. It was so high that the fruit was above them. The elephant tried to pull the tree down, but it was too strong.

"Wait a minute," said the monkey proudly. "I can climb." He ran quickly up the tree and threw the fruit to the ground. The elephant put it in his great mouth. Then they crossed the river again and gave the fruit to the Old Bird.

"Now," they said, "which is better—to be strong or to be quick?" "Can anybody tell which is better?" asked the Old Bird. "The elephant could not get the fruit alone. The monkey could not get the fruit alone. But you could get it together. One of you crossed the river, the other climbed up the tree."
