Nelson Mandela was born in 1918 in a small South African village. His father had four wives and nine children. Mandela was a clever boy and took his school exams early. Then he studied law and became a lawyer in 1952.

At that time in South Africa, black people and white people were not equal. Mandela became a leader of the African National Congress. The ANC wanted equal rights for black people. It was a peaceful organisation. But in 1960, the police killed 69 black people in the town of Sharpeville. After that, the ANC began to use violence against the government. In 1962, the police arrested Mandela and he went to prison for life. He became a hero, and black South Africans continued to fight for equality.

The world was also against the South African government. Eventually, in 1990, President FW de Klerk decided to change things. He released Mandela from prison after 27 years. Three years later, he and Mandela won the Nobel Peace Prize. And in 1994, South Africans chose Mandela to be the country's first black president.
