

PART 6

1. Match the sentence halves.

If objects have opposite charges,	<input type="radio"/>	it will not produce a current.
If electrons move from atom to atom,	<input type="radio"/>	some electrons will move from one object to another.
If there is an exchange of electrons between elements,	<input type="radio"/>	you will need four basic parts.
If an electrical circuit doesn't have a battery,	<input type="radio"/>	an electric current will happen.
If you rub two uncharged objects together,	<input type="radio"/>	this will result in an unequal number of electrons.
If you want to build an electrical circuit,	<input type="radio"/>	they will attract each other.

2. Put the words in order to create sentences.

his tomorrow. new is demonstrating invention He

<input type="text"/>
----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------

give lecture a week. coming to next is She

<input type="text"/>
----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------

afternoon. making I electrical this circuit an am

<input type="text"/>
----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------	----------------------