Apparently almost everyone wants to be famous. Fame has lots of benefits: you can make a fortune, travel the world, wear nice clothes, and people admire you. But fame also comes at a cost. Once you become a star, you never have a moment's peace. You are followed by paparazzi all the time. You always appear in the media. You have to look and act your best, even when you don't want to. Sometimes you get more attention for the things you do in your private life than for acting in a successful film or recording a hit record. Even if you don't do anything scandalous, some journalists will still write about you. Circulating rumours about celebrities is a great way to sell more newspapers and magazines! And people love reading them. Popular success can be difficult to deal with alone and you're so busy travelling that you have no time to spend with your loved ones. Although you make lots of new friends, you don't know which ones are real friends, and which ones are only interested in your money and fame. So fame isn't for everyone. If you're not careful, you could have problems.

Task A: Circle T for True and F for False.

1	The media sometimes invents stories about celebrities to make money.	T	F
2	Celebrities can spend time with their family and friends when they want to.	T	F
3	In this article we read about the advantages and the disadvantages of being popular.	T	F

Task B: Find the word/phrase which means:

4	making people shocked (adj.)
5	a person who writes news stories for a newspaper or magazine
