5. Reading text

As a high school student, Sarah had always been an honest and responsible person. She prided herself on her strong moral values and always tried to do the right thing, even when it wasn't easy. However, one day Sarah found herself facing a difficult ethical dilemma that tested her values to the limit.

Sarah's little brother, Tim, had been diagnosed with a serious illness and needed expensive medication to survive. Unfortunately, Sarah's family couldn't afford the high cost of the medicine and they were struggling to make ends meet.

Desperate to save her brother, Sarah began to consider options that she would normally never consider. One night, while out with a group of friends, they stumbled upon a pharmacy that was closed for the night. One of her friends suggested that they break in and steal the medicine that Tim needed.

Sarah was shocked and immediately rejected the idea, but as the night went on and they continued to discuss the options, she found herself wavering. She knew that stealing was wrong, but she also couldn't bear the thought of her brother suffering or even dying because they couldn't afford his medication.

The group ultimately decided not to go through with the plan, but the experience left Sarah feeling shaken and confused. She couldn't shake the guilt of even considering such a risky and unethical action, but at the same time, she couldn't ignore her brother's needs.

In the end, Sarah's family was able to find assistance through a local charity and Tim was able to get the medication he needed. However, the experience left Sarah with a newfound appreciation for the complex and sometimes difficult ethical dilemmas that people can face in their lives.
