

The difference between was and went

"Was" is the past tense of the verb "to be" and indicates a state of being or existence in the past.

"Went" is the past tense of the verb "to go" and indicates movement or action in the past.

For example:

- "I was at the park yesterday." (indicating a state of being)
- "I went to the park yesterday." (indicating an action)
- "I was feeling tired, so I went to bed early last night." (In this sentence, "was" indicates a state of being and "went to" indicates movement or action)
- "She was a student at the university, but she left and went to work."
- "He was at home all day, but he went to the gym in the evening."
- "They were hungry, so they went to a restaurant for dinner."
- "The weather was nice, so we went to the beach."

In all these examples, "was" is used to indicate a state of being or existence in the past, while "went to" is used to indicate movement or action towards a specific place in the past.
