

Make the following into compound sentences using either and, for, nor, but, so, yet – look at how the meaning of the sentences change!

Bill was sad. Dave was happy.

Bill was sad Dave was happy.

Edna was in love. Tim was not in love.

Edna was in love Tim was not in love.

Asia likes Chinese food. Karen likes Indian food.

Asia likes Chinese food Karen likes Indian food.

Asia likes going to the movies. Karen likes going to the movies too.

Asia likes going to the movies Karen likes going to the movies too.

Click for more conjunctions

home page

 LIVEWORKSHEETS