Many people were angry that Mandela was jailed. For years they marched and chanted "Free Nelson Mandela." This song of protest rang out around the world. As a result of these protests, Nelson Mandela was freed from his prison walls on February 11, 1990 and four years later he was elected President of South Africa. During this election in April, 1994, Mandela and millions of black South Africans cast the first votes of their lives. Today Mandela continues to talk about freedom. He says that all the people of South Africa must unite and work together.

Nelson Mandela spent twenty-six birthdays within hostile South African prison walls. The thousands of birthday cards sent to him might have brightened his bleak walls, but prison officials never allowed Mandela to read them. The majority of the people in South Africa are black, yet for many generations they had no say in how their government was ruled. Since Mandela was a young man, he has spoken out for freedom and fairness for all South Africans. The people in the white-ruled government were scared of Mandela's ideas of justice and in 1964 sentenced him to life in jail.
