

Welcome to Green School !It doesn't look like a school , but it is extremely green. It is located on the exotic island of Bali in the Pacific Ocean. A Canadian man, John Hardy, and his wife Cynthia founded the school because they wanted to give their four children a better future. Local workers built the school from bamboo that grows on island of Bali. The teachers write on bamboo blackboards, too. The classrooms have no walls and the breeze passes through them. They have natural light. The school uses solar power and has compost toilets- this means they don't use any water. The school is surrounded by a huge garden. Different plants grow there. There are also some animals: a buffalo, a cow and some pigs.

CLASSWORK

I. Write the words in the correct column and complete the text about city life with the missing words.

heavy traffic    lovely countryside    stress    clean air busy streets    traditional houses    air pollution local shops    large buildings    peace and quiet huge supermarkets    friendly people unfriendly people    homegrown vegetables

City	Country

Many people prefer city life because you can find everything you need in a big city. They don't mind the heavy traffic or the it causes. Most people like like office towers and shopping centres. Young people don't mind because they have a few close friends. City lovers are always in a hurry and they don't mind . They often eat out but they sometimes miss fruit and vegetables.

II. Read the article. Answer the questions.

a/ Who founded "Green School"?

Why did they found it?

Who built the school?

What material did they use for building it?

What do you think makes the school green?

b/ Why do you think the children don't like school

III. Dictation: " Mr Bean's working day". Check what you have written.
