FOOD TRUCKS

A. The NeatMeat food truck serves burgers, chips and hot black tea. All their burgers have meat, so if you're a vegetarian the only thing you'll get there are chips. If you fancy a fruit salad or some other dessert, you should try somewhere else. You can also book the The NeatMeat truck for group events organized in the open air.

B. The Yummy Food truck serves meat in their food but everything is natural. You can also order organic tea or coffee and locally grown, 100% natural vegetables, but you won't get a dessert here. All the things on the menu are low-fat, vitamin-rich and taste delicious. No wonder you can't hire this truck for parties – they're too busy serving street-food customers.

C. The Bonito food truck sells pancakes with fruit, jam and chocolate. If you're looking for healthy food you'd better go somewhere else. Everyone else will find The Bonito a paradise. They also prepare freshly squeezed juice and their own smoothies with strawberries and bananas. However, this food truck sells only to individual customers. So if you're thinking about having one at a party, check out other options.

A PICTURE IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS

3.1. ____ Do you often use those small, face-like icons in your messages? Can you imagine that one of them, a face with tears of joy, was chosen as the Word of the Year in 2015? That's surprising because it's a picture, rather than a word. There are no plans to include the icon in any dictionaries yet, but it is one of the most widely used images on the Internet.

3.2. ____ This icon is an emoji and it was created by a Japanese communications company in the late 1990s. The name was inspired by two Japanese words: e and moji, which can be translated into English as "pictograph". Emojis are images of things such as faces, weather, and activities, which include emotions. This means that some emojis are also emoticons.

3.3. ____ In the near future, numbers used as banking passwords might be replaced with pictures of faces, animals, fruit, etc. They will be easier to memorize because people have this extraordinary ability to remember pictures. The new passwords will make online banking safer because easy-to-guess pin numbers, such as birthdays, won't be used anymore.
