What is it teaching you? _____

2) We have been reading FTMUF. You will see here some paragraphs that retell the story of FTMUF. Put them in order by writing the number on the box. I'll help you by writing the first one.

____ After the museum shuts down, they carry out their plan to hide while the guards are patrolling. They're going to stand on the toilets in the bathrooms so that the guards can't see their feet underneath. Claudia finds an old, elegant bed from the sixteenth century for them to sleep in. She doesn't seem to care that according to the placard, someone was stabbed to death there

____ On Saturday, after going to the automat, she drags them to the Laundromat to get their clothes washed. After all, runaways or not, they can't be seen in smelly clothes. After being stuck in a musty museum for so long, Jamie wants to go to a department store and watch TV. Yay for new technology instead of centuries-old artifacts! Claudia puts her foot down, though. They are going to the library to research Michelangelo, and that's that.

1 Claudia Kinkaid, who only likes beautiful and fancy things, has a plan. She's going to run away, but not to some icky place like a subway station or a cabin in the woods. She's going to leave on Wednesday for the decidedly beautiful Metropolitan Museum of Art.

____ They wake up early, get dressed (even brushing their teeth!) and hide their bags and belongings in various exhibits at the museum before it opens. Instead of wreaking havoc or playing pranks on museum goers, Claudia decides that they're going to study and learn something at the museum every day. The next morning, they find a newspaper for free, thereby saving them from the money squabble they would have surely had. The story of the day: the Met acquires an angel statue at an auction for only $225. The statue may have been carved by the great artist Michelangelo himself. With something this exciting, they've got a mystery on their hands. A real life case to solve. The next day, the statue has dragged in even more visitors to the museum, and the Kinkaid kids get in line and wait not-so-patiently to see the angel statue again.

____ After stuffing all their supplies into their empty musical instrument cases, Jamie and Claudia board the school bus. They try to look natural and blend into the background. They make their way to the Greenwich train station and take it to Grand Central—the station of dreams and possibility.

3) Now, in two lines say how you think they will solve the mystery of who built the statue of the angel.

4) Now think about how you worked on these activities and choose the option that is true for you, be honest!

Video activity (n1) :

I paid attention to the video

I watched it more than once to make sure I understood

Paragraph activity (n2)

I paid attention to the instructions

I read the paragraphs more than one time to understand them

I thought about the order and why I chose to order them that way

Writing activity (n3)

I checked capitals, punctuation and spelling and made any necessary corrections
