LEN: I'm Len Ross – welcome to Sports Review. My in the studio in Manchester this evening is Sara Fuller. Good evening, Sara, and for coming.

SARA: Hi, Len. It's a pleasure.

LEN: Ok. Let's look at your of the week! What was happening here, Sara?

SARA: This photo is brilliant. It's from a match between Sunderland and Liverpool. In the fourth minute of the game, a Liverpool supporter threw a red onto the field right next to the Liverpool goal. At the same time, a Sunderland was running towards the goal with the ball. He kicked the ball – the, I mean- it heat the beach ball and then went into the net.

LEN: Really?

SARA: Yes, really! The poor Didn't know which way to look – at the beach ball or the football!

LEN: The referee didn't actually allow the goal, did he?

SARA: Well, I didn't think it was a goal, but the referee allowed it! Thousands of fans the match on T.V, of course. The T.V pictures showed quite clearly that the football went into the goal because it hit the beach ball.

LEN: No way! Didn't Liverpool complain?

SARA: Yes, but the referee didn't change his, and Sunderland won the match one –nil!

LEN: That isn't fair, is it?

SARA: Well. Maybe the referee made a, but you can't change the result after the match. Anyway, the Liverpool players were playing really badly. I think Sunderland were a much better team that night.
