

PART 2: READING AND USE OF ENGLISH

1- READING. (10 MARKS)

Read the blog about what makes teenagers happy.

What makes teens happy?

I'm Ana. Welcome to my blog. Or 'Willkommen' as we say in German!

Recently, my teacher told us about some reports on teen happiness. What do you think makes teens happy? Is it money, going out or owning things? No, you're wrong. The reports show that teens are happy when they have good relationships with their friends and families.

Everyone needs friends, but young people seem to be with their friends all the time! That's OK – young people need to spend time with their friends because it helps them to learn how to be around other people. We see our friends at school all day, and when we get home, we go online to chat there. Going online for an hour or two isn't a problem. Most teens understand this and don't spend all of their time online. The internet makes us happy and we must have it because our friends have it, but we're happier when we go out with our friends in real life.

How do we feel about our parents? The reports say teens think their parents are annoying sometimes, for example, when they text too much or ask too many questions, but teens are pleased to have their parents' help and love. Happy teens have parents who often spend time with them, eating as a family and talking about what's happening at school. In fact, spending time just talking is the number one activity to do with parents at home that makes teens happy.

And what makes us unhappy? Exams! We often worry that exams will be difficult and our marks will be bad. Many students are worried about tests that they have prepared well for! We also worry about money – we want to have enough for the things we enjoy, but we don't want to ask our parents for it all the time. It also makes us unhappy when our parents don't understand us. But we can just sit down at the dinner table and talk about it. Problem solved!

Decide if the sentences are true (T) or false (F).

1 Teens are happy when they have good relationships with the people they are in touch with.

2 Teens use the internet because that's the only way they can contact their friends.

3 Most teens are online during most of their time.

4 Students don't worry about the results of their exams.

5 It makes teens unhappy to ask for money.

Regina Flores talks about her year abroad as an exchange student

When I went to Britain last year, I was a fifteen-year-old student from Brazil who didn't know a lot about life outside of my country because I'd never been overseas before. It was time to experience a new lifestyle and Culture. So, for a year, I lived with a British family and went to a local school.

The Browns were really kind and helpful. They realised that I felt a bit scared and uncertain because I was in a new place and far away from my own family. There are three children – fifteen-year-old twins Charlie and Max, and ten-year-old Holly.

When I first got the information about the family, I thought Charlie was a boy because that's a boy's name. But when we had a video call I found out 'he' is a 'she'! Her real name is Charlotte. She became my best friend. We shared her bedroom and we often talked for ages before we fell asleep.

My school in Brazil is very different to the one in Britain. In Brazil, it's big. There are a lot of students and the area the school is on is huge. The buildings are all on one level. But in Britain my classroom was on the second floor so I had to walk up and down the stairs a lot!

Also, I wore a uniform – with a tie! – for the first time in my life. It felt really strange at first because I wear jeans to school in Brazil. After a week, I realised my day began better when I didn't have to think about what to wear! And everyone is equal – I think that's what I like best about the uniform. Back in Brazil, young people like to look fashionable all the time and it makes some students feel bad because they don't have nice clothes.

On my last day at school, my classmates surprised me with a present and a card that they all wrote messages in. I cried when I said goodbye! The next day, the Browns drove me to the airport in London. I didn't cry then. Do you want to know why? Because Charlie is coming to stay with me in Brazil next month. It's her turn to live and study in another country for a year! Hooray!
