READING

a) Kevin loves museums and he is reading an interesting article from a magazine about it. Read with him.

THE MOST UNUSUAL MUSEUM IN THE WORLD?

A Every year more than 750,000 visitors visit coral reefs in the Caribbean Sea, Mexico. They swim, and dive in the water. But these visitors are causing damage to the reef. People should do more to protect the coral reefs, but how?

B The answer is nine meters under the Pacific Ocean. It's the deepest and wettest museum in the world, and it is called the Cancun Underwater Museum. There's only one problem. You have to snorkel to visit it!

C On the bottom of the ocean, there are 400 statues of people. Local Mexican people were the models for the statues and all the statues are very heavy. When you dive down and visit the museum, you can swim between the statues, look at them from above, and sit next to them.

D A British sculptor made the statues from a special material. Coral grows on this material, so the statues are actually a new living coral reef! The statues attract new fish and sea creatures to come and live in this part of the ocean. Hurricanes and storms should not cause problems for the statues.

E So, what do you think? Is this the most unusual museum in the world?
