1. Who did what? Decide if Hercules or Atlas did.

He was in a quest for golden apples.

He danced for joy without the weight of the sky,

He paid no heed to the screaming giant.

He didn't want to hold the sky again.

His work was to hold up the sky.

He offered his help to get the golden apples.

He crossed the sea with the golden apples.

He pretended to understand that his partner didn't want to hold up the sky again.

He wanted to feel more comfortable with the weight of the sky.

He could get back the apples and started walking home.
