Music or architecture?

'Talking about music is like dancing about architecture.'

It is thought the (0) composer Clara Schumann said this in 1846, although there's no conclusive (17) of that. But what did she mean? Let's think about it. Firstly, music sends its own message to its listeners, and so it may be (18) to talk about what it means. But it is not (19) to imagine a dance troupe doing an interesting and meaningful (20) with architecture as its topic. If so, Clara's (21) quote would be wrong and talking about music may be more (22) than she thought. People can hold their own (23) opinions about all forms of art, and the artist's own intention is not (24) any more valid than anyone else's interpretation of their work. So, let's keep talking about art, music and films. Wouldn't life be dull if no one wanted to share their opinion!
