SECTION 4: READING

5 Read the article about football fans. Seven sentences have been removed from the article. Choose from sentences A – H the one which best fits each gap (1-7). There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.

Grown men with their heads buried in each other's shoulders or hidden behind shaking hands. Young mothers shouting with joy. This is what last Saturday's penalty shoot-out for the European cup produced. 1 _____ Then you'll see what passion does to people. And, while having an ugly side, it is in fact more likely to enrich our lives and make us better people.

Today, supporters are gathering for the big match. Fans who could not afford the fare to travel abroad have sold their car. 2 _____ And many will turn up without any accommodation or even a match ticket. Despite this, they will be relieved just to be there, to be part of it all. It might sound like madness but, as one who is going and is incredibly excited about it, I can tell you I feel extremely fortunate.

Passion should not be confused with obsession. There are those who live in a dream state, madly in love with someone they will never meet – because he is a dead singer or a famous actor who is unlikely ever to visit their hometown – and therefore unable to form real relationships. There are those who spend every waking hour logged on to chat rooms where the only topic of conversation is Star Wars. However, there are also ordinary people – sensible parents, husbands, employees and employers – whose interests and emotions are much more healthy and straightforward. 3 _____

Maybe some people are incapable of finding a passion, but if so they are missing out. Passions are deep, full of joy and pain, teaching you how to sob when you feel hurt, how to deal with disappointment, how to sing with enthusiasm in public (not easy). Because of them you might end up hugging a complete stranger or making new friends. 4 _____ They are a great way for families to bond together; many dads insist that they are spending their time fishing or playing chess because their child is keen, when actually they are delighted to become absorbed by something outside home, job and money worries.

Explosions of joy are normally thin on the ground. 5 _____ If you happen to follow a football or rugby team, there are celebrations all the time.

For some, a passion can be switched on and off – which is better than not having a passion at all, I suppose. Witness the behaviour that tennis brings about at the annual fortnightly UK tennis tournament at Wimbledon. Calm, controlled middle-aged women are suddenly prepared to camp overnight on damp pavements in London and squeal encouragement. 6 _____

I had a nightmare two nights ago. In the nightmare, Liverpool's match against AC Milan went to a penalty shoot-out and Liverpool lost. 'That's not a nightmare', said my husband. But isn't that the point? If I can wake up in a sweat about football, it means I'm not waking up trembling from a dream in which I crashed my car or lost my job.

In the end, what defines us as human is not only language. 7 _____ Passions are a rehearsal for life, a distraction from boredom and most of all they are fun – even when they let you down.

- A These people are also linked to forces they cannot control, but they are to be admired for it.
- B It is the ability to care about something that does not directly affect our health or wealth or importance.
- C They help you to feel part of a community and have something to tease your neighbour about.
- D In spite of their differences, they will all become a part of the same experience.
- E Otherwise cool, fashionable students are happy to wave at the TV cameras while wearing silly hats and sunglasses that spurt water.
- F If you missed the semi-final, then try and catch the European cup final on television tomorrow.
- G The birth of your child, your wedding day, a pay rise are all lovely and a reason to do something special, but they do not happen every week.
- H Others have borrowed from relatives they once promised themselves they would never borrow from again.
