PANGOLIN TRAFFICKING

In "Protecting Pangolins," you read about how pangolins are the most trafficked mammals on Earth. Some pangolins are rescued from poachers. But many pangolins die before they can be saved. The graph below shows the number of pangolins, either alive or dead, taken by poachers. The graph compares the different countries where the pangolins were found. Review the graph and then answer the questions that follow.

1. From what years was this data taken? _____
2. In which country were the most pangolins found? _____
3. How many more thousands of pangolins were discovered in Uganda than in Sierra Leone? _____
4. How many pangolins are accounted for in this graph? _____
5. What do you think the category "other" means? _____

6. Do you think this graph shows all the pangolins taken from the wild? Explain why or why not.
