If I asked you what your dream job is like, you'd probably say the following things: first of all, it should be _____ (that's why we work, isn't it?), and the working _____ should also be good. You know, some air conditioning and a comfortable chair can only be good for business. As for working hours, there are no _____, no real working hours to talk of, work starts around nine, and _____ shortly after the post-lunch siesta. After all, you can't just drive home still dizzy from the nap, so you need a _____ right after that. The office must have a _____ with huge couches so you can have a chat with your colleagues while sipping you coffee. There shouldn't be _____, if you have too much work to finish in the morning, the boss should just _____ someone to do it. Oh, almost forgot, this is a career, right? So you should be _____ every year and also get a pay rise. Last, but not least, July and December must be a part of your _____ package, one trip abroad financed by the company. You know, just to make sure that you won't _____ for a position at another workplace. This all sounds just perfect, doesn't it?

There always seems to be a problem with our current job. Sometimes we find it too _____, sometimes we don't get enough _____ to advance in our career, and of course, most of the times we aren't satisfied with our _____. We just can't appreciate how lucky we are to have a _____ job and don't have to live on the _____. Sure, at times our job _____ can be pretty low due to miserable salaries, poor working conditions, and mean _____, but at least we are able to _____ for our families. And we always have the option to turn this situation around and just _____ our own company. With care, devotion and some business finesse, we can have a good salary, _____ working hours, don't have to wait for _____ to help us make ends meet, and we'd be able to choose our own _____. After all, our best possible bosses are ourselves.
