He saw the ghost. His eyes were red, his hair was long and his clothes were dirty and torn.

So, Mr Otis became sure that there was a ghost in the house.

They talked about America and all the things they missed from their country.

He rubbed the stain but it appeared again. So he locked the library.

A strange noise came from the hall and it sounded like the clank of metal. Mr Otis woke up.

The next morning, when they came downstairs for breakfast, the stain appeared on the library floor again.

However, the stain was there again the next morning!

It was a cool evening and they went for a drive, but they didn't talk about the ghost.

By half past eleven the house was dark and everybody was sleeping.

He was not afraid. He lit a candle and took a bottle from the small table next to his bed.

Then, Mr Otis told the ghost that he needed to oil his chains and left the bottle of oil on a table near the ghost.
