ASK TINA

Dear Tina,

I'm a middle child. Sometimes I feel that my parents ignore me. My older sister is bossy. She's always telling me what to do. And my little brother is spoiled. He always gets what he wants. How can I get along with my family? —M.K.

Dear M.K.,

Middle children often feel the way you do. I'm sure your family loves you. Tell them how you feel. You're an important part of your family. —Tina

Dear Tina,

I'm the oldest child in my family. I feel that my parents expect me to be perfect. They spoil my younger brother and sister. It's not fair. I am determined to show my parents that we should be treated the same. What can I do? —J.C.

Dear J.C.,

Oldest children are often expected to be more grown up than their younger brothers and sisters. You should talk to your parents about your feelings. They may not know you are upset, and I am sure they want you to be happy. —Tina
