

Present Perfect – At the airport

1- read the text

(Lee el texto sobre Google)

Since 1998, Google has become one of the most popular web browsers. It has grown from a research project in the dormitory room of two students to a business that now employs approximately 20,000 people.

Google's founders, Larry Page and Sergey Brin, met in 1995 while studying computer science at Stanford University in California. Brin was born in Russia, but he has lived in the U.S. since he was five years old. Page, whose parents were computer experts, has been interested in computers since he was six years old.

How is Google different from other web browsers? Brin and Page wanted a clean home page. They believed that people come to the Internet to search for specific information.

The word Google started as a noun, the company's name. Today, people use it a verb: "I'm going to google the civil war to get more info about it". It is amazing how Google has even changed the way we speak!

Larry Page and Sergey Brin
