LIVING THINGS AND NON-LIVING THINGS

In nature we can find living things and non-living things. Rocks, air and wind are non-living things. People, animals and plants are living things. The main characteristics of living things are:

- They are born. All living things are born from another living thing.
- They eat. All living things need food to eat.
- They grow. All living things increase in size during their lifetime. Sometimes they change in appearance.
- They react. Living things can perceive what is going on around them, and they react to what they perceive.
- They reproduce. Living things can create offspring similar to themselves.
- They die. Living things stop functioning and cease to live.
