Anyville: Our Future

Since interviewing residents from the city of Anyville, experts have concluded two major trends for the future.

Some people think that in 50 years, there won't be any parks or trees, the river will be polluted with trash and there won't be any fish or animals in it. They also think that the city will be dirty and won't be a nice place to live in.

Other people, however, are more optimistic. They think that residents will learn to recycle trash, reuse and reduce waste. The river won't be polluted, and it will contain a lot of fish and animals. The city will be clean and green. There will be parks, and a lot of trees on every street. (Picture )
