Renata Smith, a divorced mother of two young girls, Sabrina, aged ten, and Joly, aged six, lives in Sheffield. She is typical of today's one parent single-income families living on the breadline struggling to make ends meet.

Renata was working as a secretary in the city when at a party she met Tom, a lorry-driver. They went out together for six months and then they decided to get married. At first she and Tom lived with her parents but then, when Renata was expecting Sabrina, they moved into a council flat. Tom had to spend a lot of time away from home and soon, after the birth of their second child, he left Renata to live in another city.

Renata set about bringing up the girls on her own, though her mother was always ready to help when she could. Money was the most pressing problem, and Renata, who had given up her job when Sabrina was born, had to find a post as Personal Assistant to the Sales Director and managed a local company. She has been working there for nearly two years now and enjoys spending her days in the office. When she's not at work, the girls have priority. They are the most important thing in her life, and she is determined to be both mother and father to them. She doesn't want them to suffer from the fact that their father does not live with them, and she does everything possible to provide them with a rich and rewarding life.
