CAUGHT

It all started when I was at university. I don't make friends easily and I was unhappy being away from home. I was also finding my courses at university very difficult. I went to see the doctor and he said I was depressed and suggested that I saw a therapist. The therapist told me that one way to feel better would be to 'pamper' myself – to do something good for myself. I liked the idea, but I was a student and I didn't have any money. Other than buying a big bar of chocolate occasionally, there was no way that I could afford to go shopping and treat myself.

It was then that I started to shoplift. I didn't realise how easy it was. By the end of university I knew all the places in the shops where no one would see me taking things. I was completely addicted to shoplifting. I could have anything I wanted and not pay any money at all. It felt fantastic.

One day, I decided to go into town and 'treat' myself. In one of the stores, a security guard saw me slip some things into my bag. Finally, I'd been caught shoplifting. The security guard took me to a room. I didn't make a fuss. I just went with him. He called the store manager, and they made me empty out all my bags. They wanted to see the receipts for everything. I only had receipts for two things. I'd taken stuff from six shops. When it was all out on the table, I looked at it all and I felt terrible. Standing there with the security guards and the store manager made me finally see myself as a thief.

I started crying and I apologised for stealing. I said that I would pay anything they wanted. They called the police because the stuff was worth a lot of money. Then they took down my name, address and date of birth.

The police made me take all the stuff I'd stolen back to the stores. They made me apologise to all the store managers. I've been banned from going to any of those stores again. I don't know what to do. I don't want my parents to find out that I'm a shoplifter. They'll be so disappointed in me. What's going to happen?

I told my mum. She didn't get angry with me. She was very understanding. I've made an appointment with my therapist. The police told me that the stores have decided not to take me to court. I'll just pay a fine.
