| 4. Popularity of break dance              |   |

- A. These three young men belong to 'Hip-Hop'. This movement developed during the seventies in the USA, especially in the New York Bronx. It includes rap-songs, graffiti paintings as well as break dance. For young boys and girls this movement is becoming more and more a kind of expression. They see it as a way to achieve something. Here they can express their longing for admiration, their desires and their disappointments.
- B. For too many young people in the USA - especially those living in slums such as the New York Bronx - life seems to be without sense. "Only living people are able to cry. People murder people. A world without sense." This is their reaction sung in a rap-song.
- C. The film isn't a copy of usual break-dance films. Belafonte shows more. He shows the life of youth in the Bronx and their thrilling joy of life. And he demonstrates break-dance in nearly acrobatic pictures. Little Lee, whose feet seem to be of gum when the rhythm of break dancing not only as a means of earning some cents. For him it is more than just dancing. In it he expresses his disappointments and his longing for something better.
- D. Those young people-Black and White - create a world of their own - a wild, crazy, colourful world, and the rhythm of their music is their pulsation. For a short time, they forget the cruelty of daily life in a world without illusions and without pity. The film tries to seize light and darkness of that life.
- E. So, it is understandable why little Black Lee is break dancing in the streets of New York, why Ramon-an unemployed white boy who is painting the white trains of the New York subway - considers himself to be an artist. And Kenny, who is unemployed, too, as a disc jockey produces his own music, mixing it with the help of things like dropping water taps or brushes, thus producing a truly fascinated music. The reaction of his audience speaks for itself.
- F. My first impression was that the problem dealt with is not presented as clichés, everybody gets a lot background information. In an interview Harry Belafonte said: "I've followed break development attentively. It is an outcry of a youth we all have forgotten. A shriek of a youth without future in reality, with true 'no future'..."

A Wonderful Discovery

Sarah had a son of ten, called Jack. He did not like studying, but loved watching TV. Sarah used to drive to school at half past four in the afternoon, bring Jack back home and give him his tea, but as soon as he got into the house, he always rushed to the TV set and turned it on.

'Haven't you got any homework, Jack?' his mother always asked him as she began to make the tea.

'Eh? Oh, yes, I've got a little,' he used to answer. 'I'll do it later when there is nothing interesting on TV.'

At first Sarah allowed Jack to watch TV instead of doing his homework first, but she soon discovered that he never had a little homework — it was always a great deal — and that there was never a time when there was nothing interesting on TV, so after putting off doing his homework for a couple of hours, Jack was too tired to do his homework properly, if at all.

Sarah then decided to make him do homework first. This was always a battle, and often when Jack obeyed his mother, he did the work quickly and carelessly in order to finish it and get back to his beloved TV.

The result was the same — bad work, for which he usually got low marks the next day at school, either because his homework was full of mistakes, or because he did not know the work he was supposed to have prepared the night before.

One evening Jack's science homework was about famous scientists like Thomas Edison, who made important discoveries and inventions in the field of electricity. When he had homework that consisted of learning facts, his mother usually tested him when he finished, to make sure that he had really done the work properly and not left anything out, and this is what she did this time. She didn't let him stop until she was sure that he knew what was in his book.

But this time it was less of a fight than usual to make Jack sit down and do his homework carefully, because it had a strong connection with television.

In class the next day, the teacher asked Jack, 'What are some of the things that Thomas Edison did for science?'

'Well,' Jack answered happily, 'first of all, if it weren't for Edison, we'd all be watching TV by candlelight!'
