

Present tenses

My new game is sensational - as soon as you get to a level, you start something completely different to do. (finish, get)

Generally, online customer support improves, though some computer manuals are still not accessible enough for users. (improve)

The developers deal with a number of bugs in their latest app. (deal with)

In the latest version, a dragon flies overhead and explodes when you hit it. (fly, explode, hit)

The company develops an interface to allow users to personalise their documents. (develop)

Back-up copies take time to prepare, but they are essential. (take)

Whenever you log on, the system asks you to enter your password and then it generates a random security question. (log on, require, generate)

If a computer crashes, you lose the file you work on unless you save it regularly. (crash, lose, work, save)

Use the correct present tense with the verbs in green.

