International Children's Day takes place on June 1st in Vietnam every year. It is a holiday to celebrate children, who will inherit the society we create for them. At the same time, it's also a day to remind people about how to protect and take better care of children.

Some countries celebrate Children's Day on November 20, as this was the day in 1959 that the United Nations General Assembly passed a bill on children's rights. In 1989, the Convention on the Rights of the Child was also signed. Since then, the United Nations has suggested November 20 as International Children's Day; however, member countries are also free to select their own Children's Day.

Vietnam selected June 1st as its own Children's Day. On June 1st, 1950, the first Children's Day of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam was held in secret, for fear of enemy bombing at that time. This event took place at a camp in a forest in Thai Nguyen Province thanks to its advantageous position for movement. There were many children taking part in this event. They sang songs, played games, and did other group activities for all to enjoy.

Nowadays, as the war is over and life is more prosperous, Vietnamese children welcome this holiday with more activities. Children actively participate in school activities such as singing and dancing. Some obedient children are given presents by their teachers. On this day, parents often take their children to the zoo, and game centers to spend the day playing.
