A long journey

Saroo Brierley was born in India. He lived with his mother and brothers in the town of Khandwa until the age of five. Then, a terrible event changed his life. This is his story

Saroo's father left his family when he was very young. His brother Guddu sometimes cleaned trains to earn money. One night, Saroo travelled with his brother by train to Burhanpur. Guddu told him to wait on the platform until he returned. But he didn't come back. Saroo climbed into an empty train to look for him but he was very tired and after a while he fell asleep

When he woke up, the train was crossing strange countryside. At last, it arrived in Calcutta, 1,500 kilometres from his home. Saroo lived on the streets there until a kind person took him to a police station. They couldn't find his parents, so they sent him to a centre for lost children. A few months later, an Australian couple adopted him and he went to live in Australia.

Saroo loved his new parents, but he never forgot his origins. One day, he decided to search for his birth mother. After three years, he located his birth place on Google Earth. He travelled to Khandwa and met his mother after being separated for 20 years.

In 2013, he published his book A Long Way Home. In 2016, Hollywood made it into a successful film called Lion.
