Part A. Read the article about lying. Identify the sentences in direct and indirect speech.

THE TRUTH ABOUT LYING BY JENNIFER MORALES

At 9:00 Rick Spivak's bank phoned and said that his credit payment was late. "The check is in the mail," Rick said quickly. At 11:45 Rick left for a 12:00 meeting across town. Arriving late, Rick told his client that traffic had been bad. That evening, Rick's fiancée wore a new dress. Rick didn't like it. He said: "It looks just great on you."

Three lies in one day! Yet Rick is just an ordinary guy. Each time, he told himself that sometimes the truth caused too many problems. He told himself that his fiancée was feeling good about her purchase. Why should he hurt her feelings?

Is telling lies a new trend? The majority of people in a recent survey said that people had been more honest ten years ago. Nevertheless, lying wasn't really born yesterday. In the eighteenth century, the French philosopher Vauvenargues told the truth about lying when he said: "All men are born truthful and die liars."
