* Use the correct form of the word in brackets to fit each gap.

The clothes we wear can be a form of (1)_____ (communicate). Clothes, like a (2) _____ (speak) language, give out a message. This can be very simple, for example, when we wear clothing for keeping warm, or perhaps to attend a (3)_____ (graduate) ceremony, announce our (4) _____(politics) views. It isn't always this simple, however. (5) _____ (fortune), as with speech, our reasons for making any statement have a (6) _____ (tend) to be double or multiple.

The man who buys an expensive coat may simultaneously want it to offer (7) _____ (protect) from bad weather and magically surround him with the qualities of an international film star. (8) _____ (nature), people rarely succeed in satisfying both these requirements at once. Even (9)_____ (suppose) both these statements could actually be made by one single coat, this (10) _____ (idea) item of clothing may not be available, and if it is, we may not be able to afford it.
