TEENS THREE FINAL EXAM

Paper 2

Time allowed: 1h.15' (+ List: 1h. 30')

SECTION A: Reading Comprehension

Read the text and circle the correct option, true (T) or false (F).

Rabbit Kekai the 95-year-old Beach Boy

Albert 'Rabbit' Kekai was born in Honolulu, Hawaii in 1920. He lived with his parents and five siblings near the shore at Waikiki. He tried surfing for the first time when he was three. His uncle, a life-guard, taught him how to surf and by the age of five he was surfing on his own. He continued surfing until he died at the age of 95.

Albert got the nickname 'Rabbit' because he was fast. He said that he could run 100 metres in 9.6 seconds. When he was six, he could already ride the big waves with the older boys. In those days, the surfboards were very long and heavy, compared with today, but Rabbit was able to control the board with his quick footwork. Today's best surfers can't use those heavy old surfboards. 'They look like beginners,' said Rabbit.

Rabbit was out on his board in World War II when the first bombs fell on Pearl Harbour in 1941. 'We could see all the smoke,' he said. During the war Rabbit worked as a scuba diver in the US army. In 1945, he returned home and started surfing again.

He taught many of Hollywood's most famous actors to surf – stars such as Gary Cooper and Kirk Douglas. Later on, he taught Kirk's son, Michael Douglas. Rabbit said Michael learned quickly. He could surf after just four lessons. Rabbit started "The Rabbit Kekai Keiki Surf Contest", which was held every year at Waikiki Beach to promote surfing for Hawaii's children (keiki means "child" or "little kid" in the Hawaiian language).

In his last years Rabbit Kekai still surfed every day and he continued giving lessons. He also travelled to a lot of competitions around the world together with Lynn, his wife. With his fashionable sunglasses and Bermuda shorts, he looked like a real beach boy. In 2012 he was included into the Surfers' Hall of Fame in California. Kekai died on May 13, 2016 at Leahi Hospital in Honolulu.
