

POPULATION

1. Match

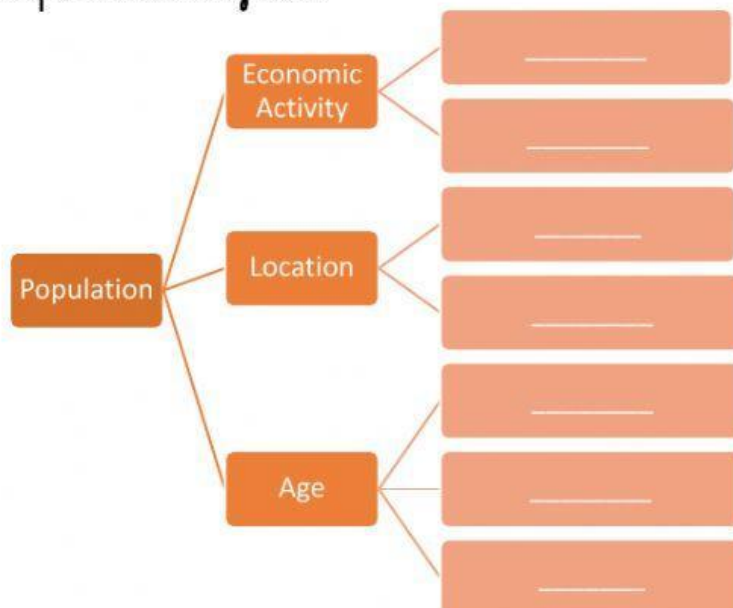

Urban population

It lives in villages, towns or the countryside

Rural population

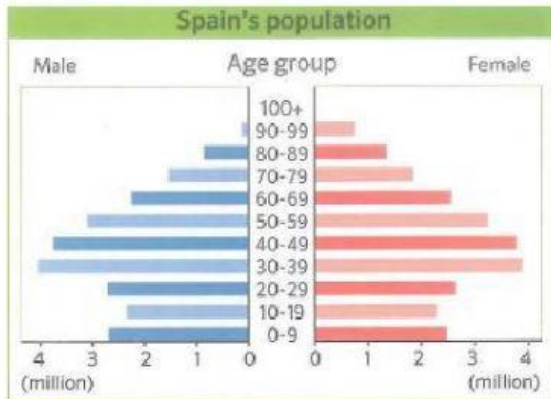

It lives in cities

2. Complete the diagram

3. Complete the text

This is a _____ graph. In this type of graphs, we can see population distributed by _____ and gender: _____ are coloured in red and _____ in blue. This graph shows us how many males and females are there in Spain according to their age group. For example we can see there are almost 4 million males that are aged ____ - ____ and almost 4 million males, too, that are aged ____ - ____.

4. Match

The birth rate

The death rate

Life expectancy

The fertility rate

Migration

Population density

is the average number of children per woman.

is the number of people living in each square kilometer.

is the number of people who die for every 1,000 people.

is the movement of people from one country of residence to another because of economic reasons, social reasons or natural reasons is the number of babies that are born for every 1,000 people.

is the average number of years a person is expected to live.

5. Choose the right answer

What are the two most populated cities in Spain?

Madrid and Sevilla

Barcelona and Madrid

Bilbao and Leganés

In Spain, there are more

Males

Females

6. True or false?

The number of immigrants in Spain make up a 11% of the total population

True

False

Spain has an ageing population because fewer babies are born and the life expectancy is higher

True

False

7. What is the population density of a region if 8,000,000 people live there and the region has a surface area of 400,000 km²?

The population density is _____