Tackling traffic problems in the UK

Listen to an extract from a radio show from the year 2010 in which a presenter discusses new ideas for tackling traffic problems in the UK. Select the five statements Andrew makes in his presentation.

- You will be able to take off and land a flying car from home.
- One firm is already building a car that will fly and run on roads.
- Andrew thinks transport can affect the kind of choices we make about home and work.
- Flying cars could be costly to fuel and maintain.
- You will have to remove the wings of a flying car for use on the road.
- Flying cars as a possible means of transport for the future are still at the planning stage.
- You will start and end your journey in a flying car at a local airfield.
- You will be able to use a flying car on the roads without any modifications.
- Flying cars will be more fuel-efficient than land-based cars.
- Andrew thinks transport can affect the kind of people we are.
