

BEST OF BRITISH!

UNLIKE FRANCE OR ITALY, Britain is not famous for the quality of its food. And the truth is, British people are very keen <sup>1</sup> _____ food from other countries. There are Indian and Chinese restaurants in nearly every town in <sup>2</sup> _____ UK – and other types of international food are popular too. However, according to a recent survey, British people are also keen on traditional British food and usually have one <sup>3</sup> _____ two favourite British dishes.

A traditional Sunday lunch with roast beef and Yorkshire pudding is very popular, and so is a full English breakfast. (This is not just bacon and eggs, of course. It also includes sausages, tomatoes, mushrooms and toast.) Another favourite, <sup>4</sup> _____ survey says, is sausages and mashed potato – or ‘bangers and mash’, as people often call it.

Sometimes, favourite dishes have a connection with a special time or place, and often the food seems to taste better because <sup>5</sup> _____ that connection. For example, a hot pie is the perfect food when you’re watching a football match. But when you’re watching tennis at Wimbledon, you want a bowl <sup>6</sup> _____ strawberries and cream.

So what is the nation’s favourite British food, according to the survey? The answer is: fish and chips – especially take-away fish and chips in paper. And especially when you’re eating it by the sea!
