THE TINY HOUSE MOVEMENT

Today, with more and more people moving to urban areas where there is just not enough accommodation available, the world is facing a housing crisis. This has caused house prices to rise significantly, so that even paying off a mortgage has become an impossible goal. 1), there may be a solution to this problem. If we all lived in smaller spaces, there would be more accommodation available and house prices would drop. 2) is the message of the Tiny House Movement, an unofficial group that promotes living in spaces as small as 80 square feet! The English architect Sarah Susanka began the movement in the late 90s with the idea that architects should "build better, not bigger". Since then, the movement 3) in popularity, particularly with environmentalists, who value the way tiny houses don't need as much electricity or heating as regular homes. Also, since tiny houses require you to have fewer belongings, they are very popular with people who want to 4) a simpler life. Today, many people associate the size of a person's house with how successful they are. The Tiny House Movement offers us a different idea: that living in a smaller space and by simpler means is the 5) to a happier life and healthier world.
