PASSAGE 1

CURIOUS CINDER

Cinder was a curious puppy. She liked to sniff flowers, bark at cats, and explore her neighborhood. One day, Cinder noticed a strange-looking animal searching for something to eat. It was snooping around the trash can on the other side of the fence which enclosed Cinder's yard. The animal was furry and small like a cat, but it had black fur with white stripes and a large bushy tail.

Cinder wanted to meet the animal so she began looking to find a way out of the yard. She whined, dug, hopped and barked. This got the attention of Rupert the cat who was napping in the sun. "I would leave that skunk alone if I were you," said Rupert yawning. "You are just asking for trouble!"

"What do you know?" Cinder replied. "You are just a silly cat. I am a curious puppy, and I do as I please." Cinder finally found an opening in the fence that was big enough to squeeze through. Cinder trotted right up to the skunk and said hello.

"Yikes!" shouted the skunk. He quickly raised his big fluffy tail and sprayed Cinder with a foul-smelling oil.

"Ugh!" exclaimed Cinder, who now smelled awful. "This stinks!"

Using the Sun at Night

My house gets energy from the sun. That kind of energy is called "solar power." We use it to power the lights, and the television. It also powers the stove and toaster. It even powers the computer.

We collect the sun's energy. There are large solar panels on our roof. These panels turn the sun's energy into electricity. Some of the electricity gets used right away. Some of it is stored so we can use it at night.

In the winter, getting enough sunlight can be hard. So sometimes we have to use electricity from the power company. But unlike solar panels, the power company uses coal to create energy. However, we need less of this electricity than we would without our solar panels. The sun is a good source of energy because it will never run out. It also costs less than the other kinds of energy.
