Amateur detective

JANE MARPLE was an Agatha Christie amateur detective. Recently Jessica Maple, an American schoolgirl, solved a crime before the police could.

Thieves stole some furniture from Jessica's greatgrandmother's house after she died. When the police came to investigate the burglary, they looked quickly around the house. There weren't any broken windows or doors, so the police thought the thieves had a key to the house. Jessica didn't agree. She knew there were only two house keys, and her parents had them.

A few days later, she went to the house to look for clues, and she found them. At the side of the house was a garage with a door leading into the house. The garage windows were broken. When Jessica looked carefully, she even found fingerprints by the window. While she was leaving the house, she had an idea. She knew there was a second-hand furniture shop near her great-grandmother's house, so she decided to go there and look for the stolen furniture. And it was all there, for sale.

'They weren't thinking,' she said about the burglars. 'They put everything in the same shop!' The manager of the shop told Jessica that he knew the thieves because they often brought him furniture, and he even gave her their names. Finally, Jessica went to the police and told them about the furniture and the thieves. They were very surprised!
