Lost and Found

- 1 Becky's family was having a barn raising. Neighbors from all over had come to help her father build a new barn. Even the children had jobs to do. Becky's job was bringing drinking water from the stream to the workers. "Now, mind the ladle, Becky," Papa told her as he gave her the long-handled cup for dipping. "It is the only one we have."
- 2 All morning Becky had carried the heavy bucket back and forth to the stream. Now she stood in the tall grass on the hill behind the barn. It was almost noon, and the sun was hot. She wanted to feel cool air rush against her face. She gripped the empty bucket and gathered her skirt. She heard the ladle rattle as she dashed down the hill.
- 3 Becky laughed with delight as she reached the stream and started to fill the bucket. Suddenly she stopped. The ladle was gone! She searched nearby but with no luck. Becky sighed with despair and thought of Papa's words. He would have to go to town in the wagon to buy a new ladle. Worst of all, there was no ladle to serve water to dozens of thirsty workers.
- 4 Then Becky remembered how the ladle clattered in the bucket as she ran. It must have fallen out. She gave the hill a hopeful look, but then her shoulders drooped. She would never find anything in the thick grass that grew there. Then she had an idea . . .
- 5 She found some of her friends setting the table for the afternoon meal. "I need you!" she told them. More friends were helping workers at the barn. They came running when Becky called them.
- 6 Becky explained what happened. "I need you to help me find the ladle," she said.
- 7 Becky and her friends stood side by side and formed a long line. Slowly they walked down the hill to the stream. They paced through the tall grass, stepping carefully as they searched the ground around them. Suddenly a boy hit something metal with his toe. "I found it!" he cried. He grinned and held up the missing ladle.

- 8 "Thank you!" Becky smiled. "We did it together!" She took the ladle and washed it off in the stream.
- 9 When the children returned, the men were using long, wooden poles to raise the walls of the barn.
- 10 Becky carried the bucket over to them. "Water, anyone?"

Sunny Rain Shower

1 The savage, blazing July sun
2 has baked my lazy summer,
3 made it crispy at the edges.
4 Even in the sheltered shade,
5 it's far too hot for fun.

6 Then golden raindrops streak
7 to the earth and splash loudly
8 on the black tar-covered street.
9 The water sizzles and pops
10 like butter in a skillet
11 and then fades to clammy mist
12 as a watery rainbow shows color.

13 The sun never, never stops boiling,
14 even through the rain shower,
15 that bright, golden fireball strains
16 to shine its summer beams
17 on me and birds in flight.
18 Like a lovely dream,
19 summertime warms my smile
20 as I dance in steamy puddles
21 and splash and dash
22 and crash my bare feet
23 through the heat of summer.

Mr. Badger

- 1 Mr. Badger loved to run. He ran every day. He ran over hills. He ran under trees. He ran forwards and backwards. "Running is fun!" said Mr. Badger.
- 2 Running made Mr. Badger hungry. It made him very, very hungry. "It's time for me to find some food and pig out!" he said to his friends, Bird and Jackal.
- 3 "Out of my way, Bird," he shouted as his friend flapped her wings and rose into the air.
- 4 Jackal was happy to hear the news. He did not like to hunt. He was afraid of the buzzing bees and scary snakes in the woods. But, Mr. Badger never felt afraid. He was known as the most fearless animal in all of the animal kingdom. Jackal followed Mr. Badger.
- 5 "What delicious treats!" Mr. Badger said as he climbed a tree. Angry bees buzzed all around him. He loved to eat the honey and the wax he found in beehives.
- 6 Jackal watched a bee sting his friend. Mr. Badger did not mind at all! He just kept eating. "Nothing can stop my friend, the silly badger," shouted Jackal. Mr. Badger handed some of the sweet, sticky snack to Jackal.
- 7 When the hive was empty, Mr. Badger climbed down the trunk of the tree. Before he reached the ground, he spotted a cobra. It slithered slowly across the sand. "What a delicious treat!" Mr. Badger said as he chased it.
- 8 Mr. Badger reached out and grabbed the snake. The snake did not want to be caught. It bit Mr. Badger's paw.
- 9 "Uh, oh!" shouted Jackal. "My friend is hurt!"
- 10 Mr. Badger sat down. He closed his eyes. Jackal watched his friend, but he was not worried. "Nothing can stop my friend, the silly badger," he said.
- 11 Suddenly, Mr. Badger jumped up. "Time for dinner!" he shouted. "Let's go find something else for you and me to eat!"
- 12 "You're a silly badger," said Jackal. "You're also a great friend."
