

Listen and fill the blanks

Chapter Four

A Red Herring

Rosamond [ ] into the kitchen,
put the box of ice cream
on the table,
and [ ] back with pink fingers.
I said, "The lady in the green hat
could be a red herring."
"A red herring?" Rosamond [ ].
"My cat [ ] red herring."
"No, not the kind you eat,"
I said. "It's something that can
seem [ ] a clue,
look [ ] a clue,
feel [ ] a clue,
smell [ ] a clue,
but isn't a clue."
"So, what do we do?" Annie [ ].

“I, Nate the Great, say that we have talked .
Now it is time to go out and  Fang.”

HOW WOULD YOU  FANG?

LIST THE WAYS.

YOU CAN PROBABLY THINK OF A  LIST.

HERE IS A  LIST:

“Look for Fang by himself,” I said.

“Look for Fang and
the green-hat lady.

to the corner of Dartmouth Street
and Oakdale Street.

Go down Dartmouth Street.

the same streets

Annie, Harry, and Fang

walked before they

the corner of Dartmouth Street
and Oakdale Street.

[ ] to their house

and [ ] if Fang went back home.”

“This will take [ ],” Rosamond said.

“Split up,” I said.

“Decide who goes where.

And go in [ ].

So that you each have a helper.”

“A helper?” Pip asked.

This must have been

Pip’s big day for [ ].

“Yes, it helps to have a helper.

I have a great one. Sludge.”

“Can we take him with us?” Annie asked.

“I, Nate the Great, [ ] him here.”

“We’re [ ]!” Rosamond said.

THEY LEFT IN A
THERE WAS NO TIME TO GIVE THEM
ANOTHER DETECTIVE TIP.
BUT HERE IT IS.
EAT
PANCAKES HELP ME
BONES HELP SLUDGE
IF YOU WANT TO THINK AND EAT WITH US, LOOK FOR MY FAVORITE PANCAKE RECIPE.
YOUR CLUE: THE NUMBER 58