A Special Girl

In December 2006, at the age of 17, Koral Cohen opened a Community Café because she wanted to help the homeless in America. In three years, Koral and her team made more than 10,000 hot meals* at the Community Café.

When she was a young teen, she started to help the homeless people. Koral loved the idea of helping people by giving them food. "I have a great family and everything I need or want, so I believe it's important to help the homeless," she said.

Koral decided that her city needed a special place for the homeless. The project started with 12 people. "I thought it would be this small project ...," said Koral. Then it grew and she looked for a building for the café. She spoke to students at her school and asked them to come and help make food for the homeless.

In 2008 Koral went to Washington to get a prize for her good work. She was one of America's top 10 amazing teens. One of Koral's teachers said, "She is always there to help people!"
