My friend believes that heroes are different from everyone else. He says that ordinary people get too (1) by the excitement around them to think clearly and help. He thinks that their (2), or nervousness, will cause more harm than good. Some people may want to help, but they are too (3) by their own doubts to step forward and help. However, I disagree and (4) this idea because it gives a negative opinion that is (5) against everyday people. Just ask a (6), like Pablito, who lived through an accident. I bet he'd say that although some people are born with the (7) qualities of a hero, almost anyone can be trained to help in a disaster or (8).
