People also know Chinese New Year as Spring Festival. It sets the beginning of New Moon Festivals in Asia. This is a huge celebration where everybody wears red clothes and accessories. Also, families get together to have a big dinner. There are parades all over the main cities, and the symbol is the dragon. There are also some warriors.

The festival was originally a day to honor Chinese ancestors. The legend says that a giant beast called Nian entered the houses at midnight to eat people. But an ethnic group whose name was Yan Huang, used to be with people to defeat Nian. Eventually, they discovered that the beast came once a year, and it was afraid of red colors, lights, fire, and noise.

They started to celebrate this festival as a way of self-defense from the beast. This is a legend, but nowadays it is a common story to tell on that day; especially for children.
