

There are five garbage patches in the world's oceans. The Great Pacific Garbage Patch is the largest of those five.

A gyre is where currents of the oceans meet and form a whirlpool system.

Currents create a circular effect that pulls waste from the surrounding areas and coastlines. The currents gather and trap the waste in swirling gyres, never to spread it again.