Do fairies really exist?

In summer 1917, Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths took photos of fairies by a river in West Yorkshire. Elsie's mother didn't want the girls to play by the river, so Elsie told her that they were playing with fairies. The girls took photos of the fairies to show Elsie's mother. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of Sherlock Holmes, used the photos in an article he wrote about supernatural phenomena. The house in Cottingley became famous, and the fairies were called the Cottingley Fairies. Many people thought the photos were fake but others believed that the fairies were real. Finally, 66 years later, in 1983, Elsie and Frances admitted that the photos were fake, and that the fairies were made from paper. Once the photos became famous in 1917, both girls were too afraid to tell the truth. In 2019, Frances's daughter will auction the photos for the public to see.
