

Summary of Chapter 2 Reflections

Rami and his father move into the cabin at River Bottom. They immediately add two rooms; a bedroom for Rami and a kitchen. The farm at River Bottom was very rich land. It comprised five acres of hillside and five acres of river bottom land.

Rami lived far from school so he rode Marble to school.

When Rami arrived on horseback the children followed him and teased him. An older boy, Collie Rainer, protected Rami by telling the students to leave Rami alone.

After Sun-Sun's bankruptcy, Jake Hibbertson has the monopoly on all the business in the village. He owns the store and now he employs many of the villagers. He is the "big rich Godfather". He is also the board chairman at the school where Mrs. Johnson is a teacher.

Rami realizes that his father's previous lavish lifestyle and generosity caused his downfall.

It is also obvious that Jake is what the women of the village, including Rami's teacher, Miss Fletcher, consider a "good catch". Jake is wealthy and single. Perhaps even Mrs. Debbie Johnson might be attracted to Jake.
