Watch again and fill in the gaps with words you hear:

It's happening in Japan. Meet Lala, _____ king penguin who used to call the Antarctic home. Lala lives here with the Nishimoto family. And this king penguin is really living like a _____. He's got his own room complete with powerful _____ and free run of the property. But Lala isn't like average couch penguin. He likes to travel that's when. The Nishimotos help him pack it up for _____ into town.

When Lala hits _____, his favorite destination is no surprise. Where else? - The fish _____. Sardines and mackerel are his favorite. He loves to eat them. He is _____.

Adorable, yes! And deserving of a doggie bag for the trip home. Lala grew up in the cold Antarctic and now lives in a city _____ its heat and humidity.

As he heads home he seems to pose at the soda machine, then moves on possibly realizing he left his change in other _____. No problem, just hit it to the neighbor's _____ for a quick cool down.

Ah.. _____! Then back on the road.

Once home, Lala gets his knapsack unpacked, _____ his room and at the end of the long day spends a little quality time with _____ the family.

Grammar point. There is a sentence in the video like 'Meet Lala, a 10-year-old king penguin who used to call the Antarctic home. Structure "used to do something" means past habit. You did something in the past but now you don't. What can be other things that Lala used to do when he lived in Antarctic and what are the things that he's doing now? What about these people below?
